Panel named to study subdivisions

To lighten the hearing load on the Monterey County Planning Commission, the Board of Supervisors Tuesday created a committee with the authority to approve or disapprove minor subdivisions.

The seven-member committee will be composed of one planning commissioner; the county tax assessor; directors of planning, environmental health and public works departments; the District Engineer of the Monterey County Flood Control District; and the county fire warden.

The Planning Commission will retain the authority to approve or disapprove standard subdivisions and divisions of land of 160 acres or more, regardless of the number of parcels.

"There is a need for more technical input into the subdivision process," said Supervisor Michal Moore.

"But in order that we don't stack the deck timewise, I suggest an automatic rotation system for Planning Commission representatives on the committee," said Moore.

Supervisor Edwin Norris rejected the idea of a 10-member committee, as recommended by Ed W. DeMars, the county planning director.

"I would prefer a committee of five or seven," said Norris. "Most of these items could be acted on by a smaller voting committee and still have technical input."

Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel felt the ordinance creating the subdivision committee was too drastic. "We have a need from the general public for input in the planning process. We have already transferred 54 functions of the board to others," Farr said.

Norris proposed a five-member committee, but at the insistence of Farr, the supervisors added representatives of the flood control district and fire warden.

Appeals of decisions by the subdivision committee will be heard by the Board of Supervisors. Evidence presented to the board on appeal will be limited to evidence presented to the minor subdivision committee.

'Valentine lady'

VALENTINES, THOUSANDS of them, have been collected over the years by Louise Shaw of Carmel. She counts more than 3,000 in her collection, in fact. Here are penny postcards popular many years ago among paramours. "Today it costs a quarter to buy a penny postcard," she remarks. A story and more photos appear on page 6. (Del Kaller photo)

145 apply for superintendent's post

More than 145 persons have applied for the $36,000-a-year Carmel school superintendent post that will be vacant in July. The deadline for applicants was Wednesday.

The secretary to outgoing Superintendent Harris A. Taylor said 147 applications had been filed by Monday. Lola O'Brien, the secretary, said she expected several more as the deadline approached.

A special meeting was scheduled today at 4 p.m. by the school district trustees.

On the short agenda was the appointment of a three-member professional screening panel to evaluate the applicants.

The panel will be composed of three educators from outside the Carmel Unified School District, said Pamela D. Smith, president of the school board. The trustees have said they will hire a new superintendent by April. Taylor, 56, has said he will resign after the school term ends in June. The panel will advance the names of eight to 12 top candidates to the trustees by Feb. 23, according to the hiring timetable adopted by the school board in December.

The second item on today's agenda was the swearing in of a fifth trustee to the board. Clayton B. Neill Jr., 48, an engineer, was appointed to the vacancy on Jan. 10. His appointment was provisional, however, because state law allows 30 days in which such appointments can be challenged by an iniative petition.

The seat has been vacant since Jan. 1 when Edward T. Reilly Jr. resigned. Reilly, elected in March 1977, resigned because of a job transfer.

Neill had no voting rights during the 30-day waiting period.

He has served two terms on the school board, but resigned in 1969 after his second term expired. Before appointing Neill, the school board interviewed 15 candidates for the post in a lengthy public session.

Sewer pact is readied

Directors of the Carmel Sanitary District are scheduled to vote Monday on an amendment to their 1968 contract to dispose of wastewater from Pebble Beach. The amendment ties fees the district charges to the quantity of waste from Pebble Beach that it processes.

The new contract terms were approved on Jan. 26 by the directors of the Pebble Beach Sanitary District. The Carmel board is scheduled to meet at 8 p.m. to discuss the amendment and other district business. The meeting will be convened in the Carmel City Council chambers on Monte Verde.

If approved, Pebble Beach would pay a percentage of the Carmel operating cost determined by the amount of waste Pebble Beach piped to the local sewage treatment plant. It presently pays a flat one-third of the Carmel district's budget.

"If we accounted for 25 per cent of their flow, for example, then we would pay 25 per cent of their treatment and disposal costs," explained Edward Gast, general manager for the Pebble Beach sewage agency.

In addition, Pebble Beach would pay a 7 per cent administrative charge, he said.

About one-third of the waste treated by Carmel is from Pebble Beach, according to James Pruitt, a Carmel district director and chairman of a local subcommittee that negotiated the proposed contract change. He declined to explain the proposal other than to say it had been worked out over a period of several months.

The Carmel district board also is scheduled to hear progress reports Monday on construction of a $1 million solid waste digester and an update of the areawide facilities plan last revised in 1973. Kevin D. Walsh, the staff engineer from the district, said this week that work on the digester had been slowed because of recent rain and he said consultants were not yet ready to issue new information that would lead to an update of the facilities plan.

Salinas mother to run against Norris

A 35-YEAR-OLD Salinas mother of two children is challenging Monterey County Supervisor Edwin Norris for his 2nd District seat.

Barbara Shipnuck, former president of the League of Women Voters of Salinas, announced her candidacy last week. She was introduced to a group of potential supporters at a private gathering in a Carmel Valley home on Sunday.

Mrs. Shipnuck, who is a credentialed school teacher, is a part-time law clerk and researcher. She is enrolled as a second-year student at the Monterey College of Law.

"Government in Monterey County has moved too far away from the people," she said. "Citizens should be encouraged to participate and should know that when they do, they will be heard and not ignored. I would encourage them and I would listen," she said.

Mrs. Shipnuck said, "The board has become so polarized that it is pulling away from the public."

She said many citizens are being "turned off" to participation in the process because they have been rebuffed so many times. "He's always going to vote against my wishes, so why should I bother?" is the attitude many disappointed petitioners are adopting, she added.

"People have a preconceived notion of which supervisors they can talk to. The supervisors should not be unapproachable. I'd like to have a hand in changing the atmosphere," she said.

Mrs. Shipnuck added: "There needs to be someone on the board who is willing to hear views from all sides. I want to hear from people in or out of my district."

PLANNING AND LAND use are not major issues in her district, Mrs. Shipnuck said, since most of the population of the district is in Salinas. Those questions are taken care of by the Salinas municipal government. Health care services and property taxes are the main concerns of voters in her district, she said.

"The cost of county government must be related to the actual services delivered to the people and not to the number of reams of paper it produced.

"Quality health care must continue to be delivered by Natividad Medical Center. The Board of Supervisors must become a more effective bridge between the private and public medical communities," she said.

In the field of juvenile justice, Mrs. Shipnuck said: "It is necessary to place greater emphasis on programs of prevention rather than detention. There are state funds available for this purpose which have not been requested."

To battle-weary residents of the Carmel and Carmel Valley areas, Mrs. Shipnuck's views on land use and planning are of primary concern. Supervisor Norris, along with the two other supervisors from "over the hill," have frequently overridden the County Planning Commission and given approval to developments in the Carmel-Carmel Valley area over the vehement

MAN OF the hour was Ronald G. Hunter, named the 1978 Valentine Man of the Carmel Valley Women's Club at its Valentine meeting last week at Rancho Canada Golf Club. By official proclamation . . .

Hunter is women's club 'Valentine Man'

Grateful recognition during the February luncheon meeting of the Carmel Valley Women's Club was given to Ronald G. Hunter of Monterey Savings and Loan Association. He was named the 1978 "Valentine Man" of the women's club.

Hunter and his wife were honored guests of the organization at the Rancho Canada Golf and Country Club, where he was presented with a badge and listened to a reading of the proclamation which stated that he had assisted the women's club in time of crisis, published its 1977-78 yearbook and volunteered support for the Fiesta de los Amigos. "Therefore, be it known, we have elected him 'Valentine Man' of the Carmel Valley Women's Club," the proclamation said.

Fish christening?

Buche's host celebration of mounted fish

Never been to a fish-christening party?

Few, if any, of the invited guests had either until Dr. and Mrs. Dale Buche hosted a celebration last week marking the arrival of the mounted sailfish Dale caught on April 15, 1977, in Mazatlan, Mexico. The catch measured 8.5 feet and weighed 92 pounds.

Many of the guests had shared in the excitement of Dale's fishing adventure while they were attending a medical convention last spring in Mexico. Those invited to bring their pictures, slides and fish stories to share were: Dr. and Mrs. Gene Eldridge, Dr. and Mrs. Tak Hattori, Dr. and Mrs. Jack Dodd, Dr. and Mrs. Gerald Oehler, Dr. and Mrs. Harry Raynes, Dr. and Mrs. Michale Supansich, Dr. and Mrs. Darrell Jewett and Dr. and Mrs. Phil Thorngate.

Adding their condolences to Dale for the "big Marlin that got away" were Mrs. Chris Roller, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Colvin, Mr. and Mrs. Don Swiess, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Worth, and special guests, Dr. and Mrs. Gus Gerdes, Dale's roommate at medical school.

Spaghetti feed, 'Grandma's Attic' at Tularcitos

Teacher Patrick Allan will put on his chef's cap and once again blend the secret ingredients in the sauce that turns the Tularcitos annual spaghetti feed into a gastronomic delight. Dinner will be served from 6 to 8 p.m. on Friday in the multi-purpose room.

"Grandma's Attic," an old-fashioned rummage sale with old-fashioned prices, is scheduled in conjunction with the dinner. In addition to a good selection of clothing and toys, sale items include a floor polisher, a child's swing and a luggage carrier.

Music will be provided by a local combo, "Stars and Garters." Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Ford Rd. residents welcome new baby girl; grandparents visit

If patrons have noticed a pink glow about Andres Restaurant in the Barnyard, it's an aura of happiness produced by the arrival of a baby girl for owner Michael Block and his wife, who reside on Ford Road.

Lisa Kimberly Block weighed in at seven pounds, five ounces at the Community Hospital and is the first grandchild for Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Huizingh, who came from their home in Denver to assist with the homecoming. Adding his welcome is paternal grandfather Joseph Block.

Emergency Medical Care Committee reappoints trio

Representatives of three Carmel agencies have been reappointed to the county Emergency Medical Care Committee by the Board of Supervisors.

The committee acts in an advisory capacity to the board and County Health Department on emergency medical services and related matters.

Reappointed for two-year terms are:

- Jay Hudson, associate administrator of the Community Hospital of Monterey Peninsula;
- Robert Updike, fire chief of the Carmel Fire Department; and
- Hank Weston, ranger of the Carmel Hills Station, California Department of Forestry.

Women's group hosts potluck

Dishes from around the world were sampled at the International Night Potluck dinner hosted last Wednesday evening by the Women's Association of the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula.

Herb Blanks led the devotions and the program featured displays, pictures and brief talks by Mr. and Mrs. Akira Oshida, Mr. and Mrs. Blanks, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Fehring and Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Lachelt.

School shake-up long overdue

By AL EISNER

AN ELEVEN-YEAR-OLD boy whose reading test scores show he is far ahead of his grade level cannot answer the question: "Who was Christopher Columbus?"

Another youngster of the same age, after successfully completing a reading assignment on the Transatlantic cable, cannot figure out under which ocean the cable lies.

A seventh grader who does not get any homework at the junior high school he attends works with his parents for at least one hour a day to make up for the work he does not get at school.

Where are these things happening? At inner city schools with a high percentage of minority students? At impoverished rural schools with a low tax base?

No. They are happening right here in the affluent Carmel Unified School District and to the dismay of educators and parents alike. All this despite the fact that the district spends about $1,500 per child, which is far above the state average. All this despite the fact that our schools have an extremely low percentage of minority students. And despite the fact that the parents of these same students achieved a high level of education and seek the same for their children.

A report to the school board trustees last month on the results of statewide tests for sixth and 12th graders showed that our children were performing in certain categories at the lowest levels statewide for school districts that have similar educational and economic indicators. (Sixth graders placed in the 67th percentile statewide in spelling skills; high school seniors scored in the 87th percentile statewide on written expression tests.)

School administrators point proudly to the high rankings in many areas, including the statistic that 80 per cent of the graduates of Carmel High School go on to college.

But how can we explain another statistic? After spending a year in kindergarten in Carmel schools, children are ranked in the 75th percentile statewide in spelling. When one considers that there are 300,000 to 500,000 Spanish-speaking children attending California public schools, it is a dismal record. Our kids ought to be in the 95th percentile.

WHAT HAS gone wrong? Why aren't our youngsters doing better?

The problem is not unique to Carmel. Magazine cover stories trumpet: "Why Can't Johnny Read?" Educators and parent groups all over the nation are groping for answers.

The national dilemma undoubtedly began when the Soviet Union launched the first unmanned space flight 20 years ago. When Sputnik blazed across the skies, the educational establishment quivered and with huge transfusions of federal money, shifted to a technologically based system.

Vocal minority groups demanded programs for the disadvantaged. Liberal arts programs suffered. Educators sought programs that could be absorbed by the lowest common denominator.

Reading and writing were deemphasized. Science faculties grew.

Then, the most powerful assault came. Schools were asked to deal with the "whole person," instead of drilling in the 3Rs.

Writing in a November issue of Newsweek, Suzanne Britt Jordan, an English teacher in North Carolina, said: "We suddenly, naively believed that we could 1) make everybody happy, 2) make everybody well adjusted, 3) forgive everybody who failed, and 4) expect gratitude to boot. When students were surly, uncooperative, whiny and apathetic, educators decided they themselves didn't know how to teach — we look for every reason for the declining test scores of our children except for stupidity and laziness.

"The function of schools, their first and primary obligation, is not to probe tender psyches, to feed and clothe the homeless, nor to be the papa and mama a kid never had. The job is to teach."

And teaching is hard work. It's a lot more fun to take a field trip, putter with pottery, study native Indian folklore or paint the set for the school play than it is to drill in spelling. Teachers and kids alike prefer to discuss "lifestyles" than to translate a difficult passage from another language.

This kind of activity, if extended to its extreme, will turn our children's heads to mush.

I'VE SPOKEN to scores of parents in the Carmel School District who yearn for a return to teaching basic skills. I've spoken to many others who have learned to thread their kids through the schools by carefully picking and choosing their teachers.

"Oh, don't get stuck with that one," they say.

"Your kid will never learn anything in HIS class," I've heard.

What about the hundreds of trusting parents who believe the myth that Carmel schools are comparable to those of Beverly Hills, Hillsborough, San Marino and other posh communities?

There are lots of concerned parents who say Carmel used to rank with those schools, but, alas, no more.

I have a specific suggestion for parents to ponder: let's create some special classes at Carmel Middle School for children whose parents want to emphasize the basic skills. This was done several years ago in the neighboring Monterey Peninsula Unified School District at Larkin Junior High School. The children stay with one teacher all day. They don't move from classroom to classroom. For some it's dreary. Some kids might think it's tough. It certainly isn't as much fun as attending regular classes.

This was attempted a few years ago at Carmel Middle School. In a little-publicized program, parents of fifth graders could opt for the basic skills classrooms. The program dwindled for lack of interest.

With the awakening nationwide interest for more attention to the basic skills, maybe it's time we ask our school board trustees and the administration to move with the times.

There have been some moves in that direction, but school board trustees tell me they lack input from parents. It should be noted that shifting energies and manpower to basic skills will mean other programs will have to suffer. Tough choices might have to be made.

If you want more emphasis on the basics, call or write all of the five school board trustees below. A new superintendent will be hired in April, according to the district schedule. You may be able to have a voice in the kind of person who is selected for this key position.

If you're concerned, here is your chance to do something about it.

One opinion

No national park please

By PAULA WALLING

This is meant as an open letter to Ansel Adams regarding the Park Service proposal for Big Sur.

We have just about reached the point where if anyone else climbs on the bandwagon to save Big Sur, it will collapse. The best thing that could happen to preserve Big Sur is for no one to know where it is.

I hope that this land remains essentially unchanged for the generations to come. But I foresee grim consequences if your plan of federal domination over the area comes to pass. Your proposal, while it may work for your generation and mine and possibly one more, will not work in the long run. Such a proposal would mean giving up control of Monterey County to the nation in general, saying that they can better handle our land. I don't believe that.

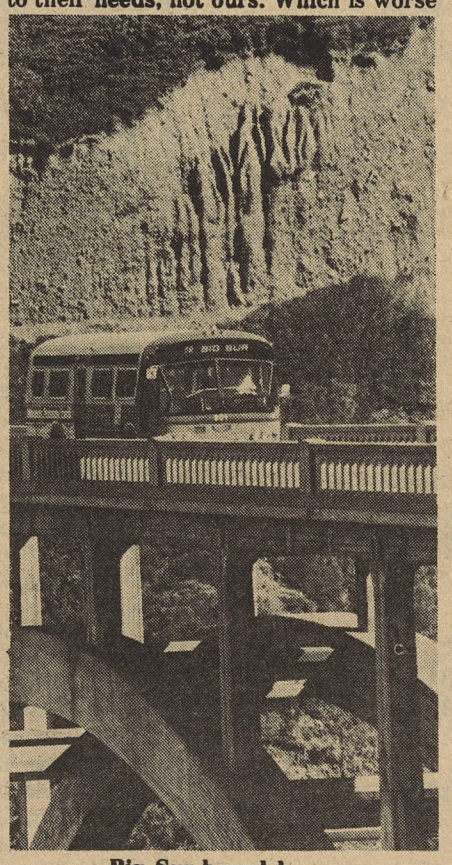

For a short time, the idea might provide some protection against a local developer. But to put it in the words of a Monterey architect who has a home down here, "The park is a development." He meant the State Park, but it goes even more for a National Park.

I, too, worry about the rash of panic building perpetrated by the Coastal Plan. When people fear the loss of their land, they react with panic (e.g., the Rocky Point area, Pfeiffer Ridge and Otter Cove). They develop land they had left untouched for years. When you threaten people, they react.

To quote Nathaniel Owings, "When they started out at Point Reyes, everybody was a sheep farmer, and by the time the seashore went through, everyone was a land developer."

People feel forced to build or lose to the lowest bidder, the government. This kind of building is considered most unfortunate by those of us who live here and see the changes daily.

But had you thought that there might be something worse? If the government owned the land (or any more of it — they own most of it now), Monterey County is likely to become "useful," its resources irresistible to a growing population. And that population, not our local one, would control the power to develop according to their needs, not ours. Which is worse for the land, restricted housing or dams, atomic power plants, offshore drilling and mining? All these and more are under consideration by the U.S. government for the area you propose be nationalized.

Big Sur-bound bus.

If the federal government owns all this land, who in heaven's name can stop them from reducing it to rubble "for the common good." Consider Amchitka. Could anyone? Could the Sierra Club? Could the people through pressures on their congressmen and women stop that outrageous atomic blast? Of course not. And, of course, you say, that won't happen here. No, I doubt it.

I submit for your consideration that the present arrangement, because it has a system of checks and balances, is the best we can have, awkward though it may be.

Big Sur is privately owned and county controlled, state owned and federally owned. Federal land includes the Los Padres National Forest, Hunter Liggett Military Reservation, Point Sur Naval Facility and two U.S. Coast Guard facilities. The state parks include Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park, Molera, J. P. Burns, John Little. Recent purchases and land slated for acquisition by the state is too extensive to list. Additionally, there is talk of locally owned and maintained land trusts.

I like to think of this dispersed ownership as American democracy on a small scale; that is, the three branches of government with a free press keeping close watch over all of them. Permit me this analogy. In Big Sur, we have three governmental agencies, the county, state, and federal, with local citizens who are familiar with the land acting as the free press. We are the only ones, in fact,

This county needs a 'Petaluma Plan'

School crowding, farmland buy-ups inevitable otherwise, says planner

By PAUL F. PATCHICK
County Planning Commissioner

Opinion

I BELIEVE THAT a county has the right to restrict growth and that the people who live in an area have a right to challenge the relentless push for premature construction.

The Supreme Court in 1976 upheld the city of Petaluma's right to restrict growth in the face of a legal challenge by the construction industry.

Soon Monterey County will feel the impact of unchecked housing development on its crowded schools, just as it is seeing its prime agricultural land encroached upon by developments. In Petaluma, water and sewage treatment services were similarly hard pressed to accommodate its average annual population growth of 18 per cent in the early 1970s.

In 1972, the Petaluma City Council adopted a growth management plan. The year previously, its citizens indicated in a poll that they wanted to keep the city's population under 40,000. It was 30,000 in 1977. I would favor a similar growth management policy.

Petaluma's City Council in 1973 proposed to limit housing development to only 500 units a year through 1977. Eighty-two per cent of the voters on an advisory ballot measure approved the council action. I would push for a similar regulated growth policy.

The key to controlled growth is realistic planning. A five-year plan is most reasonable. I would argue for a balance in housing construction within all sectors of the county to provide a mix between single-family and multi-family dwellings. I would urge the elimination of speculative building. I see no obligation for a community, such as Carmel Valley, to attract people through pure speculative home building.

I FAVOR the establishment of guidelines and criteria in advance, so that planners and developers will know exactly what is expected of them. For example, all developments might have to score a minimum of 100 points out of a possible 130 to even qualify for consideration. A development would be rated on the basis of site design and other factors. In brief, the county planners will have decided in advance just what type of development will be permitted.

Again, returning to the Petaluma approach, each development proposal is assigned points on a pre-determined scale for:

- The ability and capacity of the existing systems to provide water, sanitary and drainage facilities for the proposed project without system modifications beyond those which the developer would provide.
- The ability and capacity of the existing fire, school and major street linkages to provide services without modification that the developer might provide.
- Design quality, including the quality of architecture, site selection and design, lot orientation, landscaping, traffic safety, private safety, open space and publicly accessible green belts.
- Provision for foot and bicycle paths.
- An orderly and contiguous extension of existing development.
- The provision of needed public facilities and the provision of units to meet the city's policy goal of 8 to 12 per cent low- and moderate-income dwelling units annually.

I personally favor developments which follow the slope of the terrain to minimize grading. I would disallow developments with extensive cuts and fills, especially where the cuts were high. I would favor developments minimizing energy usage. I would watch carefully developments in questionable soil and bedrock areas or in areas involving geologic hazards, such as landslides, mudslides or seismicity.

The above approach would save Monterey planners the time-consuming process of negotiation between planner, architect, developer and the county through its board of supervisors.

I believe that every living thing is part of an "ecosystem," and since all ecosystems are related to each other, every living thing is somehow related to every other living thing.

Human beings are not the center of the global ecosystem. Every activity of man is done within the context of ecology. The demands that nature makes on the behavior of man and other species are nonnegotiable. Living in accord with these ecological principles begins to ensure a life of quality and meaning. Ignoring these principles is surely courting disaster.

NOTHING IS FREE. Every change in an ecosystem affects another part of the ecosystem. Since the earth's resources are finite, any progress, development, profit or expanding economy in one area robs the resources of another area. An example is the exportation of the Carmel Valley groundwater via wells by the California-American Water Co. to supply Monterey and vicinity. The Carmel groundwater basin could easily support the Valley residents if its own water resources were not "robbed."

Nothing can be thrown away, really. Everything has to go somewhere. When resources are extracted, shuffled or discarded, they have an effect on the ecosystem they are taken from — and on the ecosystem in which they are dumped.

Living things have organized themselves into ecosystems, or communities of mutual dependence and support. Many species of plants and animals work together to ensure their own survival. Man needs to plan to be able to adapt to the ecosystem.

Ecology is easy to understand. It is simply the way living things, including man, interrelate to one another and to the earth, air and water to support life on our planet — or in our county. The root meaning of "ecology" is "earth household," or "housekeeping on earth."

Each species within an ecosystem has its own niche, its own household. The wider the niche spectrum — the more life opportunities each species has — the more stable the ecosystem. If people, for example, could eat only lobster, the human race would have become extinct long ago.

Unfortunately, man sees his relationship with nature and with himself as a never-ending battle. Man feels that he must compete with other men and conquer nature. Building a dam, for example — or building a sewage treatment plant.

Our demand for endless economic growth results in mountains of garbage and the permanent exhaustion of much of the earth's irreplaceable resources.

(Editor's note: Patchick, 48, was appointed to the Monterey County Planning Commission by Supervisor Sam Farr. The appointment was confirmed by the supervisors on Jan. 31. Patchick, a geologist, lives in Pacific Grove. He released this statement earlier this week as a "position paper.")

We make other money green with envy.

If there's one thing all economists agree on it's this: Money is happiest when it's safe, and when it's growing.

Which are exactly the conditions we provide at Northern California Savings.

Deposits are insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which keeps them safe. And they keep growing, because in addition to our Regular Savings, we have all of the high yield Certificate Accounts. It depends only on how much you wish to save, and for how long.

$20,000, in six years, can become $31,838.63 when held in a 7.75% annual rate account with daily compounded interest left to accumulate.*

So if your money isn't earning quite that much, and you suspect it isn't entirely happy where it is, you know what to do.

We'll make it positively ecstatic!

What 'reliable source' says

Dear Editor:

I have heard from a reliable source that Rippling River is being considered as a research center for aiding persons with cancer, cerebral palsy, stroke victims and many others. This would be monitored by a two-time Nobel Prize winner. Dr. Salk is starting a similar center to study multiple sclerosis.

I have also heard that another HEW project could take Rippling River over for low-cost housing.

Which do you think would really do the most for Carmel Valley?

Congressman Leon Panetta should be able to help get the much-needed research center underway. If he could, he would get my vote this year. Write and let him know before it's too late.

Sandi Lane

(Editor's note: The Rippling River Center is owned by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development as a result of a loan foreclosure in 1976. The department intends to sell the facility, originally a residential complex for the handicapped, according to Dirk Murphy, special assistant to the director of the San Francisco area for HUD. "We are not considering any one alternative at this time," he said, but Murphy indicated the department wants to sell the property at some future date.)

'Early retirement' for aged but able Carmel fire truck

In an action Councilman Bernard Anderson called "a nice neighborly act," the Carmel City Council granted the use Monday of the fire department's 1930 Mack truck by the Cachagua Volunteer Fire Department. The city will retain title to the engine.

"It is not valuable to the city department, nor is there a proper place to store it," remarked City Administrator Jack Collins. He called the action "the solution the City Council has long sought."

The 48-year-old fire truck has been stored at five different locations in the past 10 years. It is no longer usable as a first-line engine in Carmel, according to the fire department.

The Cachagua Volunteer Fire Department also offered to "try and restore" the engine. The vehicle has been out of service since 1966.

"The engine is only 48 years old, not 62. We are granting it an early retirement," quipped Councilman David Hughes.

Sierra Club to host hikes on Saturday

The second annual Valentine's Day hike over the pastoral trails of Toro Park is planned Saturday, Feb. 11, by the local Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club. Members of other chapters and interested nonmembers are welcome to join the outing.

Hikers will meet for the eight-mile hike at Cinema 70 in Del Monte Shopping Center, Monterey, at 8:30 a.m. or at the far parking lot in Toro Park at 9 a.m. Bring lunch, water and a pleasant disposition. For more information, phone leader Larry Lapidus, 1-422-5529, or John Doering, 1-422-2541.

Also on the outing calendar is an easy-to-moderate hike to Blue Rock Ridge, Sunday, Feb. 12. The eight-mile hike involves about 800 feet of elevation gain. Sights promised include the northern edge of the Marble-Cone fire, a view of Uncle Sam Mountain and Danish Creek watershed and maybe even a full Los Padres Reservoir.

Bring lunch, water and boots and meet at 8:30 a.m. at Brinton's in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Rd., Carmel, or at 9 a.m. at the Bank of America parking lot in Carmel Valley Village.

For more information, phone leader Merrill Jones, 624-3052 evenings.

Vows to fight

Dear Editor:

Fly to the storm cellar, Mabel! The Marriott monster is breathing fire!

The wily proponents of the proposed hotel complex in the mouth of the Carmel Valley won a first-round victory at the supervisors' meeting, Jan. 31.

Possibly duped by a clever Marriott ploy, the supervisors reached an extraordinary decision (against the better judgments of Sam Farr and Dusan Petrovic).

They gave Marriott the right to speak unopposed at the forthcoming meeting Feb. 14 to determine the validity of Marriott's plan (relative to its environmental impact report).

Unopposed?

Yes, Mabel. Unopposed. Opponents of the tourist intensive development will be silenced at the climax meeting. Only Marriott will be allowed to speak and without fear of rebuttal.

What, Mabel? You say it doesn't smell democratic? It's perhaps not legal? It's certainly unfair to concerned citizens like yourself? Ah, but that's the way it is when artful lawyers artfully manipulate.

But don't cower in the cellar, Mabel. Gird your loins and prepare to fight. The battle's only just begun.

Failing schools

Dear Editor:

Every taxpayer and parent in the Carmel Unified School District should read the excellent article by Judith Eisner telling about the splendid educational system at All Saints' Episcopal Day School (Outlook, Jan. 26).

Copies of this article should be sent to all school board members and to friends throughout our country. Many Americans are greatly concerned about the deplorable condition of the American educational system. There was a most informative article in a famous national magazine describing classroom conditions in American schools — the violence, the disrespect, the hostility and how students feel they have license to behave any way they wanted to knowing that nothing will happen to them.

Many young people today are influenced greatly by peer pressure and they often reject their parents' counsel in order to be one of the group. The result is that our educational system is creating drug addicts, alcoholics and sex perverts. The development of strong, healthy, bright, interesting youth is neglected because school administrators are not able to solve the educational problem. However, the administrators of All Saints' Day School appear to have a curriculum which should be adopted by all public schools.

The only way to build a nation or a country is from the home to government, not from government to the home. The home is built through the church. Schools should develop character in children who, in turn, will build the home and good government.

All parents should want their children to be four-fold developed to assure a strong America. I'm sure parents do not want to see their children end up in mental institutions and human garbage dumps.

One century of 'I love you'

VALENTINES HAVE become more ornate since the early 1800s. The invention of paper lace and delicate cutouts caused the change. Here, a young couple is surrounded by flowers and doves — popular symbols found on the cards.

LOUISE SHAW holds an antique valentine depicting a pair of doves drawing a cart covered with flowers. Such ornate valentines were popular in the early 1900s.

Vast collection of valentines traces eras of courtship

FEBRUARY 14 has special meaning to people in love. The feast of Saint Valentine, however, has taken a back seat to the exchange of cards inscribed with verse declaring amorous devotion.

In the last 20 years, Louise Shaw has become known as the "Valentine Lady" of Carmel for her collection of 3,000 of these romantic missives.

"I'm a sentimentalist," said Mrs. Shaw. "Collecting valentines is something I can't explain. Some people just need to collect things."

Valentine's Day celebrates the festival of a Christian martyr beheaded in Rome in the year 270. The exchange of cards on this day is said to have no connection with the saint.

Some researchers, however, say the Roman Catholic Church used Feb. 14 as the day to Christianize the pagan holiday of Lupercalia. On that day, girls' names were placed into a box. Boys then selected the name of their "girl" for the following year.

Mrs. Shaw regrets the decision by the Roman Catholic Church to remove Valentine from its official list of saints.

> 'The heyday of valentines came between 1830 and 1850,' she said

"It was a very sad day for me," she said.

"The heyday of valentines came between 1830 and 1850," said Mrs. Shaw. "The first valentine message was sent in 1415 by the Duke of Orleans, who was imprisoned in the Tower of London. It's not known whom he sent it to."

The oldest valentine in Mrs. Shaw's collection is a single-page Bartolozzi engraving titled The Endless Knot of Love. Two cupids are shown entwining ribbons and flowers.

"Most people don't like some of the older valentines because they are not pretty," said Mrs. Shaw. But over the years, the invention of a process which yielded paper lace caused valentines to become more ornate.

"The British were such sentimentalists," she said. "They sometimes enclosed tiny messages within the card."

MRS. SHAW BEGAN colleting valentines as a child. They were saved by her mother and returned when she reached adulthood.

It wasn't until 1952 that Mrs. Shaw became serious about collecting valentines. An assortment of antique valentines on sale at a department store caught her fancy. She began looking for cards in antique shops. As her collection grew, so did the popularity of her talks each spring on the history of the patron saint of lovers.

Mrs. Shaw stopped giving valentine talks when her husband died five years ago. "He never gave me a valentine," she said, "but I loved him just the same."

A fire in February 1976 nearly destroyed her collection. "A short circuit (in the electrical wiring) damaged the albums and books, but not a valentine was lost," Mrs. Shaw said. The rest of the house suffered severe damage.

Today, Mrs. Shaw sits on a sofa and chairs covered with red and white Victorian prints. Some of her valentines decorate the house in frames and glass cases.

"Collecting is like breathing — it's something I have to do," said Mrs. Shaw.

The play will be directed by Joseph Hanreddy, the former resident director of the Studio Theatre in Carmel, and will star Bob Lester, Wendy Goldman and Bob Colter.

The regular after-show cabaret, which begins at 11:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday evenings, stars co-hosts Bruce Tuthill and Jane Strauch in a variety show of music and comedy by many Peninsula performers.

Near upset scares first-place Padres

By JAY POSNER

A flat Carmel High varsity basketball team survived an upset bid by the smaller Gonzales High Spartans Friday and squeaked out a 48-46 victory at Gonzales.

The Padres remained 7-0 in MTAL play as a result of a game-tying free throw by John Frincke and a game-winning four-foot jumper by Tom Frincke at the final buzzer.

During the game, the lead changed hands or was tied a total of 21 times, including 10-10 and 36-36 ties at the end of the first and third quarters, respectively.

The Padres opened up the biggest lead of the game in the fourth quarter when Dave Stevenson converted two free throws with 2:39 to go. They yielded a 45-40 Carmel lead. However, Gonzales guard Joe Mendoza (who led all scorers with 18 points) went to work and scored six straight points to give the Spartans a 46-45 lead with 28 seconds left.

With eight seconds remaining, John Frincke was fouled and awarded two free throws. He sank the first shot to tie the game, but missed the second. Jim Irwin tipped the rebound out to John who fired a pass underneath the basket to brother Tom. Tom, who scored 12 points in the game, whirled and hit a four-foot jumper as the buzzer sounded.

Stevenson paced Carmel's scorers with 17 points as well as grabbing nine rebounds to lead the Padres in that category.

Tom and John Frincke had seven and six rebounds, respectively, and they each scored 12 points.

Tonight the Padres meet the Robert Louis Stevenson Pirates on the Pirates' home court.

IN THE junior varsity game, Carmel breezed to a 60-42 win as four Padres — Mark Nottenkamper, Adam Sherburne, Art Strum and Pete Thamer — all scored 11 points.

Prior to that game, Carmel's freshmen came from behind to edge the Spartans 41-35. Greg Raynes led Carmel with 14 points and Todd Bliesner added 11 points.

CARMEL SPORTS

Carmel swimmers claim six gold medals in S.F.

Splashing into the 1978 AAU synchronized swimming season, the Carmel-based Cypress Swim Club claimed six first-place gold medals, six second-place silver medals and four third-place bronze medals at the weekend Pacific AAU Age Group Synchronized Swimming Championships in San Francisco.

In the 15- to-16 age group, Kerry Wald staged a surprizing jump from seventh place in the preliminary round to third in the final solo routine competition. She won a bronze medal and a qualifying spot for the Region 13 AAU Championships starting Friday, Feb. 17, in Anaheim. It was a bittersweet victory for Kerry, however, because she edged out her cousin and duet partner, Pavia Wald, who finished in fourth place.

The two then paired for the duet competition in the 15-to-16 age group and pulled off an upset gold medal victory over the leading duo of Becky Dewees and Laura Fehely of the Hayward Flying Fins. Going into the finals, the Hayward duet was ahead by a half point, but the Wald cousins won in the end by two points.

In the 17- to-18 age group solos, Robin Currier and Tina Wald of Cypress retained their preliminary placements of second and third, respectively, behind San Francisco's Cindy Borbeck, but closed the scoring gap by one point. In the 17-to-18 duet competition, they also were held to second-place silver medals by Borbeck and Cookie Bischard, also winners in the 15- to-16 solo event.

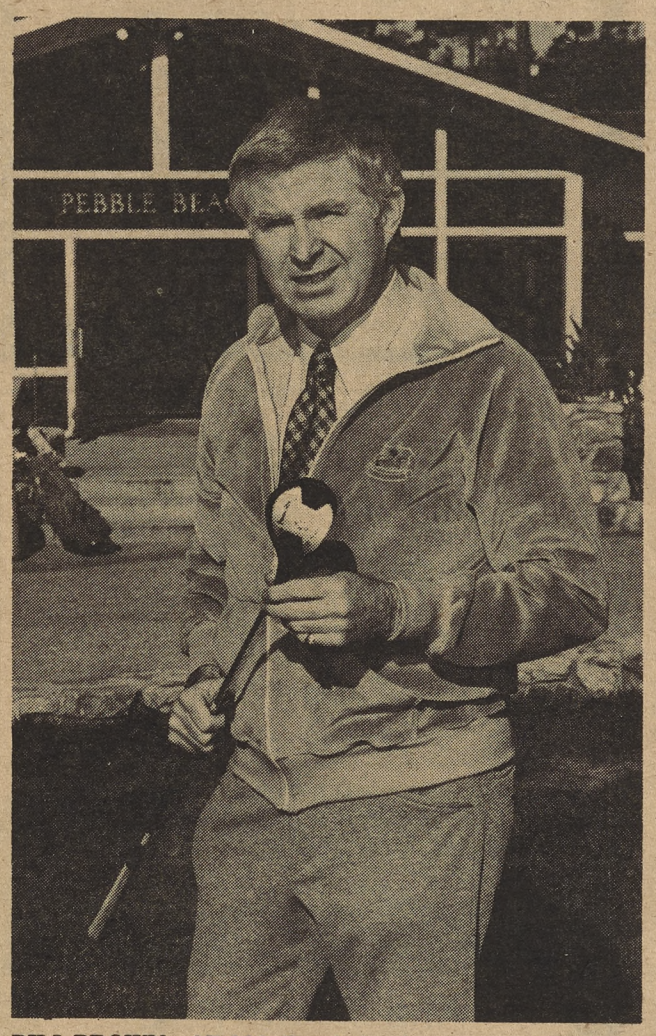

Cypress gained revenge, though, in the 15- to-18 team event. The local foursome won the gold medals, defeating the heavily favored eight-girl San Francisco Merionette team. Despite the AAU rule which gave the Merionettes a two-point bonus over the Cypress foursome (one-half point per swimmer over four), Cypress came from behind to overtake the Merionettes and win by more than a point. The California Coralettes finished third; the Santa Clara Aquamaids fourth. In the 11-to-12 duet competition, Tone Grinde and Brenda LaMica, swimming together for the first time, placed eighth.

11-12: Brenda LaMica, 12th; Tone Grinde, 37th; Cindy Cornford, 62nd; and Christine Winge, 68th.

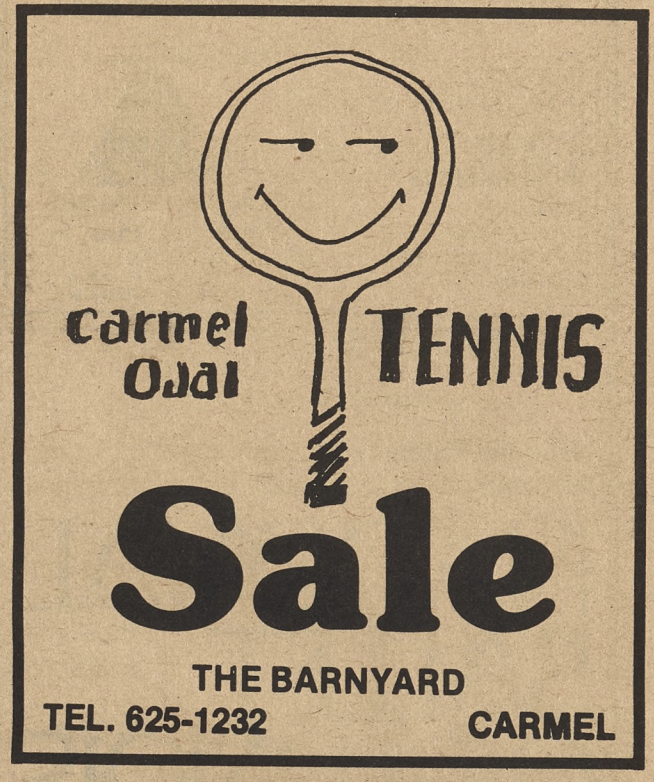

13-14: Heller Gardner, 41st, and Diana Marks, 52nd.

15-16: Pavia Wald, third; Kerry Wald, seventh; Maia Weir, 27th; and Kim Wright, 28th.

17-18: Robin Carter, second, and Tina Wald, third.

Mexico film slated

Mexico: Wonderful Mexico, a film in the Explorama travel-adventure series, will be screened at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel, Thursday and Friday, Feb. 9-10. The program begins at 8:15 p.m. each evening.

Narrated by the producer, Thayer Soule, the film includes footage from Mexico City, Cozumel, Acapulco, Taxco, Puebla, Guadalajara, Puerto Vallarta, Mazatlan, La Paz, Guaymas, Patzcuaro, Oaxaca, San Cristobal de la Casas and at Mayan and Aztec ruins.

"What I emphasize in this film," says Soule, "is the Mexico of today, which is greatly changed from a decade ago, although it still is a land of friendly people with scores of great sights and fascinating places. The first half of my film concentrates on Mexican history, with particular emphasis on the Indian culture. In the second half of the film, I try to present highlights of some of the familiar tourist places of the country and some of the lesser known regions, many of which have only recently become accessible to the traveler."

Soule, who spent three months in Mexico producing the film, which is his eighth about Mexico, says, "Mexico is still a traveler's delight and, although it is changing, it is definitely not spoiled."

Tickets, at $3.75, are available at the Julia Marlowe Box Office in Sunset Center.

Big Sur

who can keep close watch over it.

Here are some reasons the present system of checks and balances needs to continue.

Monterey County (and of course Big Sur) unfortunately finds itself between two metropolitan areas whose people, as the years go on, are going to make greater and greater demands on its land. Indeed, they have already. But I'm not so concerned about our being a recreational resource (though that can be exceedingly damaging to the environment). What concerns me is our proximity to these cities, and the destructive use they may wish to make of this county.

As these cities grow, demands for fuel, power, water, minerals, lumber and so on could cause tremendous environmental damage to this area. People will not be without these conveniences. They will find a way, the easiest usually.

The people of Monterey County would be shocked and outraged if two atomic power plants were to spring up in the area you propose be nationalized. Yet the potential, indeed the likelihood, of such a proposal is great. Or suppose our mountains begin to look desirable for burying nerve gas, poisons, or nuclear waste products. The federal government still wants offshore drilling in these treacherous, geologically unstable seas by 1981 — a certain disaster for the sea otter and yearly migrating California grey whales, shorebirds and the entire kelp bed ecosystem — as if staving off a deep-water port weren't enough! And you want more federal control?

The time will come when only this present system with state, county, and local citizens will be able to hold the federal bureaucracy at bay. If they own the land or have first option on it, we have no checks, no balances, no power whatever.

A national park, reserve, seashore or any other national designation is dangerous to the future of Monterey County and Big Sur because in "national emergency," such park or reserve land may, by simple paper shuffling, be turned over in part or in total to any number of agencies — such as the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (for dam and arsenal building), the Atomic Energy Commission (for power plant construction), the Bureau of Mines (for mineral extraction), or the Department of Interior (for offshore drilling).

The people who live near the land are best prepared to keep watch over it.

It isn't just a matter of what you call "the inevitable, selfish, individualistic sense of potential loss" by local people. We love the land most. We live on it. We know it. And we, the local people, are best suited to taking care of it.

I've mentioned some potential radical consequences your proposal might bring upon future generations. What about more immediate undesirable consequences?

National parks are beset with littering, water and air pollution, fires, vandalism, and violent crime. A national designation would bring an enormous influx of visitors and would, at the same time, bring a higher crime rate to the Monterey Peninsula in general and Carmel Highlands in particular — as well as in Big Sur.

Now if Big Sur business people were greedy, you'd think they'd want all this increased revenue. Not one I know of favors the idea.

Your proposal would line the pockets of a few people, while drastically deteriorating the tax base of the county and driving taxes up for the average Peninsula homeowner, according to the tax assessor's office.

Because you have national and international prominence and credibility, you also have the ability to create a monster for future generations to try to undo. Please reconsider.

(Editor's note: Paula Walling is a resident of Big Sur.)

McLuhan film at Monterey library

This Is Marshall McLuhan: The Medium Is the Message and Goodbye God, I've Gone to Bodie will be screened at the weekly film program at the Monterey Public Library, 625 Pacific St., Monterey, Thursday, Feb. 16, at 2:30 p.m. Everyone is welcome to attend the free one-hour program.

McLuhan narrates the 53-minute film which presents some of his most important theories and illustrates them with examples and comments from prominent authorities.

Goodbye God is the story of Bodie, Calif., told in song and verse. Through the Saga of Lottie, an old song inspired by a one-time Bodie resident, the history and development of the ghost town is chronicled.

Comedy on stage at Studio

Don't Drink the Water, a hilarious Woody Allen comedy, is on stage Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings at the Studio Theatre/Restaurant, on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel. Dinner is at 7 and curtain at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday evenings; both are one hour earlier on Sunday.

The play is the story of an American caterer and his wife and daughter who are trapped behind the Iron Curtain and take refuge in the American Embassy. While there, they must deal with the bumbling son of the American ambassador and a priest who has taken up magic as a hobby to while away the time until he is able to leave the country.

The American caterer is played by Sam Karas; Edie Karas plays his wife; and Sylvie Lestrade plays their daughter, Susan. The ambassador's son is played by Gregory Niebel and the priest is Jeff Hudelson.

'I'm a Camera' at Sunset Center

I Am a Camera, a 1955 British movie made from the same Christopher Isherwood story as Cabaret, will be screened at the American Theater Film Festival program Tuesday, Feb. 14, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The program begins at 7:30 p.m.

Julie Harris recreated the role of Sally Bowles she played in the original stage production, which won the New York Drama Critics' award in 1951. The play was adapted by John Van Druten from Isherwood's Berlin Stories.

Big cat show at fairgrounds

Cats galore — both the long and shorthair varieties — will compete for the title "best cat in show" at the American Shorthair West Cat Show Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 11-12, at the Monterey County Fairgrounds, Fairgrounds and Garden Rds., Monterey. Show hours both days are 10 a.m.-5 p.m.

Mrs. Tucker says Male Man is currently negotiating with a cat food company to become the "cat personality" for cat food commercials.

In addition to the "bluebloods," plain old alley cats will be entered in the household pet classification. Among the household pets will be Fat Cat, a large Siamese cat with white feet who lives at the offices of Cypress Computer Corporation in Monterey.

Mrs. Shipnuck favors a policy of balanced growth that would preserve prime agricultural land. "We also have to take into account where the water is. Just because it rained for eight or nine weeks does not mean the problem of water supply has been solved," she said.

"We also have to take into account the housing needs of the people who live in the county now.

"If we work in those areas with an awareness of environmental factors, then I feel it will help encourage those people who feel they will lose their jobs because of planning," she added.

While Mrs. Shipnuck avoided comment on specific land use questions, she said she disagreed with the vote taken just last week on approval of a subdivision in the Robles del Rio area of Carmel Valley. It was approved 3-2 on appeal from denial by the Planning Commission.

"I would have voted against it," she declared. "What concerned me was that it amended the General Plan while a new Master Plan for the Valley is being formulated. The board has to come to grips with getting the Master Plan in conformity with zoning.

"The Planning Commission and the board are working against each other. It's an unhealthy situation," she added.

Mrs. Shipnuck pointed out that the election will be held in November if no other candidates come forward in the district. This is a change from the past, when a primary was held in June even if only two candidates were in contention.

MRS. SHIPNUCK was born and raised in New York. She attended elementary, junior and senior high schools in the city and received a BA from Brandeis University. She also holds an MA in education from Harvard University.

Before she started teaching in 1964, she had various summer and part-time jobs as a library assistant, youth counselor and clerical assistant. She taught at Columbia Grammar School in New York from 1964 to 1967 and from 1968 to 1970 at North Salinas High School.

In addition to her service as an officer of the League of Women Voters, Mrs. Shipnuck was a member of the Education Task Force of the League in 1975-76. She was a member of the committee that organized Senior Citizens Crime Prevention and Consumer Protection Conferences in 1974 in Monterey and Salinas. She was chairman of the 1973-74 Study of Consumerism in Monterey County for the LWV, and in 1973, was cochairman of the Monterey County Consumer Affairs Committee.

She is a member of the Juvenile Justice Commission; chairwoman of the Religious School at Temple Beth El; finance director of the LWV of Salinas; a member of the Parents' Club Board at University Park School; a member of the Women's Health Task Force; and a member of the Steering Committee of Monterey College of Law Women's Association.

Her husband, David, is an instructor in economics at Hartnell College. They have two children: Louisa, 7, and Alan, 4.

WHY DID Mrs. Shipnuck decide to run for County Board of Supervisors?

"It was my concern for the growing feeling of helplessness among the people in the county. People want to know: 'Will you listen to us?' instead of ignoring them entirely. You can't ride roughshod over the wishes of the people.

"It's a job, and the people are my employers. I will have to be accountable to them," she added.

The present board of supervisors is comprised of:

- 1st District (North County), Kenneth Blohm
- 2nd District (Salinas area), Edwin Norris
- 3rd District (South County), Dusan Petrovic
- 4th District (Monterey Peninsula), Michal Moore
- 5th District (Carmel, Carmel Valley, South Coast), Sam Farr
